

CASE STUDY

Post terminal in Tomtebodå, Sweden

The Post Office in Sweden is the dominating post operator and the only company that offers post services over the entire country. The Post Office has been a limited company since 1994 and is wholly-owned by the Swedish Government via its Ministry of Industry, Employment and Communications. The Post Office in Tomtebodå is one of Sweden's largest private buildings and has a lot of modern equipment including driverless trucks. The terminal is strategically located next to European highways and main line railway.

Perfect for our premises

Inge Arnell at the Post Office tells why they use Aura Long Life:

"As we don't need to change our fluorescent lamps as often when we use Aura Long Life we save both time and money. Put simply, Long Life lamps are quite frankly perfect for our premises."

Long collaboration that works well

Inge continues:

"We have been working together with Aura Light for a lengthy period, and over all these years their deliveries have always been dependable. Furthermore, we have always been met courteously and with a friendly demeanour by the sales staff!"
